General Information

Overview

In this unit you will explore advanced digital technologies and their application to agriculture. Agricultural technology (Agri-tech) is one of the fastest developing industries, with new innovations regularly becoming available to improve the understanding of agricultural systems and production and environmental sustainability. You will learn the basic concepts underpinning the operation of sensors, communication platforms and data management systems and will be exposed to both established and emerging technology innovations. You will use a wide range of agri-tech to collect and analyse data, and provide recommendations for application of the technology in the context of intensive and extensive plant and animal production industries. You will explore the social adoption, economic and legislative issues related to these rapidly developing technologies. As well as gaining a theoretical understanding, you will practise using a range of sensor hardware, software and analysis systems, providing you with essential skills as an agricultural professional.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from In class.

Feedback

Students appreciated the range of technologies discussed in class. They enjoyed the contributions provided by researcher experts.

Recommendation

Continue to engage domain experts from industry or research to provide cutting edge case studies, activities and discussion sessions.

Feedback from SUTE

Students would like face to face classes.

Recommendation

Face to face online classes will continue to be offered each week. Students will be encouraged to attend these live where possible.
