General Information

Overview

In this unit, you will build on your introductory knowledge of the science of the musculoskeletal, renal, immune and lymphatic systems, gastrointestinal, integumentary and reproductive systems to explore fundamental pathophysiology (alteration in function as seen in disease) of these body systems and the pharmacology of drugs used in the treatment and management of diseases. Throughout this unit, you will develop your knowledge of body systems in both healthy and disease states, and how these disease states may be managed therapeutically. The unit concentrates on common major diseases of these body systems which facilitates a comprehensive study of the pathophysiology encountered in these disease states, as well as gaining an understanding of normal physiology. This is complemented by the study of the treatment and management of these diseases, whilst also focusing on the professional and legal responsibilities that underpin the use of medicines in the treatment of human disease.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Self reflection

Alignment between the recently updated textbook and existing lecture recordings could be strengthened to support consistency across unit learning materials.

Recommendation
Consider updating pre-recorded lectures, where required, to ensure alignment with the recently updated textbook.

Feedback from Email

Feedback
Students commented that they like the pre-recorded lectures that are presented in a Moodle lesson format with activities embedded after some of the recordings.

Recommendation
The pre-recorded lectures in each week will be updated into a Moodle lesson format and activities will be created and included in the lesson after some of the recordings.
