General Information

Overview

This capstone unit will provide you with an opportunity to examine and critique current health practices issues prior to your entry into the Medical Laboratory Science professional workforce. Your study will focus on the contemporary legislative, social and economic trends in the Australian Pathology profession that will impact on your practice. You will be required to exhibit ethical decision-making and clinical/professional reasoning at a graduate level, in preparation for practice.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Emails

Due to the transition from one unit coordinator to another mid-term created some delay in response to emails

Recommendation

Attempt to provide only one unit coordinator per term. In this case, the change in unit coordinator was unforeseen, and the replacement Unit Coordinator ensured the students were abreast of the situation

Feedback from Self-reflection & SUTE

Assessment items were structured well; scaffolding assessments worked well for the students, allowing them to defend their written work via an interactive oral

Recommendation

This assessment structure will be maintained for future offerings.
