General Information

Overview

This unit will introduce you to Digital Transformation (DT) and how organisations are embracing it to automate their manufacturing or business processes to stay profitable and competitive in the market. At present DT is rapidly taking place in almost all business sectors in the world such as universities, healthcare, mining, agriculture, education, supply chain. While the businesses are embracing automation to reap the economic benefits from it, this unit will help you to understand the DT journey covering digitization, digitalization, and digital transformation and what it involves. While studying this unit you will have the opportunity to apply your knowledge about DT to help transform businesses via working on various business cases. Furthermore, this unit will also introduce the social and ethical considerations involved with digital transformation initiatives.
