General Information

Overview

This unit provides the essential skills and techniques for scoping workplace problems and developing an effective research proposal for investigating and solving the problem. It provides an in-depth introduction to the critical thinking and planning required in the initial stages of a workplace research project. You will undertake research problem definition and design a research project. You will also consider appropriate methods for your analysis. This unit is designed as the pre-requisite for the successful completion of a professional project major.

Offerings For Term 1 - 2027

- Mixed Mode

Attendance Requirements

All on-campus students are expected to attend scheduled classes – in some units, these classes are identified as a mandatory (pass/fail) component and attendance is compulsory. International students, on a student visa, must maintain a full time study load and meet both attendance and academic progress requirements in each study period (satisfactory attendance for International students is defined as maintaining at least an 80% attendance record).

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Unit Coordinator

Feedback

Student attendance has been affected by timetabling constraints, as both enrolled students are working professionals with competing employment commitments. The scheduled class times often conflict with work hours, limiting participation in live workshops and tutorials. This appears to be a key factor contributing to lower attendance rates rather than a lack of engagement with the unit.

Recommendation

Where feasible, schedule classes after 5:00 pm to better accommodate students with work commitments and improve attendance and engagement.

Feedback

Given the applied nature of the unit, where students undertake an action research project within their workplace, consider reducing the frequency of weekly workshops and replacing some sessions with milestone-based consultations or targeted support sessions. This approach may better align with students' project needs while maintaining access to guidance through recorded resources and individual consultations.

Recommendation

Consider replacing weekly workshops with fortnightly workshops, as the applied nature of the unit and its assessment structure do not require weekly sessions. A fortnightly schedule may better suit students' workplace commitments, improve attendance, and provide sufficient time for students to progress their action research projects between workshops.

Feedback

The unit is currently only available to students in the Accounting major. However, the content and learning outcomes appear to have broader relevance and applicability beyond accounting. Restricting enrolment to a single discipline may be contributing to the low enrolment numbers observed in recent offerings. Expanding access to students from other business disciplines may warrant consideration in future curriculum reviews.

Recommendation

Review the current enrolment restrictions for this unit. As the unit focuses on applying action research in real-world professional settings, its content has relevance beyond the Accounting discipline. Allowing students from other majors to enrol may increase participation and enhance the diversity of perspectives and experiences brought to the learning environment.
