General Information

Overview

This unit follows on from Foundations of Chiropractic Practice 1 (CHIR11001). You will continue to learn the principles and practice of chiropractic within the context of the Australian health care system. You will develop assessment and interpretation skills related to joint motion palpation, muscle testing and gait analysis. The biomechanical principles which underpin these procedures will also be explored and applied within a clinical context.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from SUTE and verbal feedback

Feedback

Some students felt that the audio on some of the recordings could be improved upon.

Recommendation

It is recommended that the new Unit Coordinator review the recordings and make any required updates.

Feedback from Verbal feedback

Feedback

Students enjoyed the diversity of teaching staff that contributed to the practical classes.

Recommendation

It is recommended that the discipline continue to ensure a diverse teaching team for the practical classes.

Feedback from SUTE

Feedback

Some students felt that additional theoretical content or learning activities should be integrated into the practical classes.

Recommendation

It is recommended that the new Unit Coordinator explore opportunities to further increase the theoretical lecture content into the practical classes.
