General Information

Overview

Business processes enable organisations to deliver products or services effectively to their customers. In this unit, you will explore the core concepts of traditional, human-centric business process management (BPM) alongside contemporary, data-driven process analytics. You will gain hands-on experience in analysing, modelling, and evaluating business processes using industry-standard methods and analytical tools. This unit bridges the gap between how processes are designed and how work actually happens by teaching you to interpret digital event logs to identify operational bottlenecks and inefficiencies. You will apply these practical techniques to existing 'as-is' processes and model improved 'to-be' scenarios. Ultimately, this unit equips you with the skills to propose evidence-based process improvements and communicate recommendations effectively to professional audiences.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Unit Coordinator self- reflection

Feedback

Difficult to maintain academic integrity with the advances in generative AI.

Recommendation

Develop assessments that require students to analyse and critique generative AI and reflect on their use.

Feedback from Student feedback

Feedback

Assessment 1 due dates continue after Assessment 2 is due

Recommendation

Structure Assessment 1 as an independent practical task to ensure clear sequencing and avoid overlap with subsequent assessments.
