General Information

Overview
This unit explores how economic principles can be applied to real estate and property-related issues. You will examine the economic, social, and environmental factors that influence property markets and development outcomes, and learn how these factors shape decision-making in the built environment. The unit introduces a range of economic tools and frameworks used to evaluate property and planning challenges, before examining urban and regional economic issues with a particular focus on infrastructure planning and its role in supporting sustainable growth and development.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Unit Coordinator

Refine the rubric for Assessment Task One.

Recommendation
The AI stakeholder assessment was a novel addition. It will be continued but as part on of going refinement a revised and more detailed rubric will be provided.

Feedback from Student Evaluation of Unit

Feedback
'Enjoyed the course. [Lecturer] does a great job presenting the workshops. Feedback is timely. Expectations are clear. Content is thorough but not overwhelming.'

Recommendation
Continue the same weekly class (workshop) structure. Use the same feedback approaches with a refined rubric.
