General Information

Overview

Early Childhood education and care services have an important role in ensuring that Australia's vision for all children to thrive in their early years will be accomplished. Enacting curriculum with children to ensure their holistic development requires thoughtful decision making that draws on professional knowledge, knowledge of children and local contexts, and understandings of the relevant learning framework. As you examine approaches to curriculum that are responsive to children, you will consider also how the way we view children impacts our work with them. You will research and apply strategies for gathering data about children's learning with particular attention given to sharing information with stakeholders. You will analyse the learning of children to document their curiosities, capabilities, discoveries, knowledge skills, theories and involvement in learning. Drawing on your engagement with observing, assessing and documenting learning, you will reflect critically to determine implications for your future learning and practice.
