General Information

Overview

This unit examines the technological skills and knowledge necessary in a 21st-century digitally connected world. In this unit, you will investigate the theoretical foundations of e-learning and how technology offers a platform for inclusivity, creativity, and innovation with a particular emphasis on Web 2.0 interconnectivity and Web 4.0 intelligence. It is both theoretical and practical, providing opportunities to develop, refine, and reflect on skills and literacies related to e-learning in a secondary context. The unit also encourages ongoing reflection on the cultural and critical aspects of technological literacy while helping pre-service teachers to expand and enhance their existing technological skills.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Student feedback; staff reflection

Feedback

Multiple platforms required for completion of assessment tasks were excessive.

Recommendation

Consolidate platforms required for assessment completion to reduce confusion.

Feedback

Excessive workload resulting from too many features in Assessment Task 2.

Recommendation

Refine Assessment Task 2 with clear expectations, ensuring weekly workshops address these.

Feedback from Staff feedback

Only online tutorials are offered, but these were poorly attended, possibly due to the timing of the sessions during school hours.

Recommendation

Consider tutorial timing to optimise attendance.
