General Information

Overview

There is a wide variety of electrical equipment used within modern aircraft systems. This unit covers the electrical fundamentals module of the European Union Aviation Safety Agency (EASA) Part 66 Aircraft Maintenance basic knowledge requirements syllabus. In this unit, you will develop knowledge of electron theory, other electrical fundamentals, and how electrical power is generated, controlled and used in aircraft. You will study the DC and AC circuit fundamentals and the common hardware used aircraft electrical systems. You will also develop skills in the maintenance of electrical power systems, gaining hands-on practical experience with different types of systems, components and configurations. This unit is delivered at Aviation Australia campuses by Aviation Australia staff in partnership with CQUniversity. .
