General Information

Overview

This unit explores the foundational role of communication in midwifery, focusing on how core skills such as active listening, written and digital literacy, therapeutic interaction, and cultural responsiveness contribute to quality maternity care across diverse contexts. You will apply this communication knowledge to clinical and professional scenarios, reflecting critically on how interpersonal competence supports collaborative practice and decision-making. These skills are essential for enhancing your readiness for the midwifery professional experience component of the program, and remain important throughout lifelong clinical practice, helping you engage confidently with women, families, and interdisciplinary teams.
