General Information

Overview

This unit advances your study of obstetric ultrasound from MEDS12006 Gynae + Early Obs Sonography and MEDS13001 12-24 Week Obs Sonography to explore the sonographic assessment of normal and pathological third trimester obstetric cases. You will study the sonographic appearance, scanning techniques, management and pathological complications associated with third trimester scans as well as become familiar with investigations and interventions relevant to the management of post partum patients and prenatal anomalies of the fetus. You will also investigate sonographic studies relating to a paediatric patient. Common paediatric anomalies as well as inherent congenital diseases will be reviewed to include their sonographic appearance, safe scanning techniques, prognosis and treatment. Clinical scenarios/case studies are used to engage you in the sonographic decision-making process for both the third trimester scan and the paediatric patient.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from SUTE data

Students suggested the lectures on the paediatric head had too much information and needed to be condensed as the topic is difficult to follow.

Recommendation

Review the paediatric head lectures and breaking them down into smaller lectures.

Feedback from SUTE data and UC reflection

Feedback

Students found it difficult to manage the tutorial time due to it immediately preceding another unit's tutorial.

Recommendation

Revise tutorial timetabling in conjunction with the other unit co-ordinator to reduce conflicts.
