General Information

Overview

This unit supports you in your preparation for your professional life beyond graduation. You will learn about contemporary perspectives on professional practice, professionalism, and careers, and you will develop your understanding of how these concepts are related to your future career choices. You will develop awareness of the labour market, as well as the competencies required in the pursuit of various career options. Throughout this unit, you will rely on self-analysis and reflection to establish your own level of competence and personal development needs. Based on understanding the environment, career options, and your current situation, you will strategise for future career success by setting career goals, working towards them, and planning for continued success through lifelong learning and continuous professional development.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Informal conversations with students; teaching team feedback; self-reflection; feedback from the CQU Careers Team

Incorporate more presentation-style activities in the unit, to ensure students are well prepared for interviews and other forms of communication in a careers context

Recommendation

Incorporate lecture content, workshop materials, and assessable items requiring students to present themselves in a career context.

Feedback from Informal conversations with students; self-reflection

Feedback

Guest speakers were positively received by the cohort.

Recommendation

Retain the Careers Team as guest speakers, and seek to include further career-relevant guest speakers in future offerings.
