General Information

Overview

Most countries now have economies in which service products represent over 50% of GDP, and are experiencing digital revolutions in the marketing of service products. In this unit, you will focus on the challenges of marketing service products and the corresponding managerial implications in the modern digital world. You will gain a solid understanding of service marketing theories to guide your practical applications in this exciting area of marketing. The focus of this unit is on the 7Ps of service marketing as applied to businesses in the digital era. The unit also specifically covers the integration of marketing, management, and customer relations in competitive digital environments and markets.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Self-reflection

Additional relevant video resources on the Moodle site can further support student learning.

Recommendation

Additional relevant and up-to-date videos should be added to the Moodle site to support student learning, reinforce key concepts, and provide contemporary industry examples that enhance engagement and understanding.

Feedback from Student feedback

Feedback

Students appreciated the teaching team's communication, extra support, and overall approachability.

Recommendation

It is recommended that these practices be maintained, as they contribute to student engagement and retention. The unit coordinator demonstrated significant commitment to student support, including offering an increased number of one-on-one Zoom sessions and weekly contact with students to maintain motivation throughout the term.
