General Information

Overview

In this unit, you will develop skills and knowledge required to communicate effectively in health care settings in the culturally and geographically diverse Australian context. You will gain knowledge of the contemporary issues in health communication including the advantages and challenges of technology (for example online, social media and digital health). You will practice communication skills and apply your understanding of effective communication to demonstrate competency in distance health care communication relevant to people from different cultural and geographical backgrounds.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Student feedback

Students found the learning materials interesting and tutorials enjoyable to participate in.

Recommendation

Continue providing a variety of communication content and include more application scenarios in the tutorials for students to engage with.

Feedback from SUTE feedback

Feedback

Some students preferred that each assessment task details be released at the start of term instead of throughout the term.

Recommendation

Provide comprehensive assessment details for all assessments earlier in term.
