General Information

Overview

Working and learning in Cross-cultural Communities A is the first of two units undertaken across two terms. In this unit you will undertake an unpaid work placement of 120 hours to allow you to develop the relationships, skills and knowledge necessary to effectively work in a cross-cultural context. These relate to developing effective working relationships with colleagues in an organisation or community, developing partnerships that promote the co-generation of knowledge within these organisations or communities, and to be able to effectively co-plan and evaluate your own learning. You will be supported throughout your work placement and will be encouraged to deepen your reflexivity by examining your own assumptions and behaviours that could influence workplace relations and productivity.

Assessment Tasks

1 Case Study of a Community Health Issue in Australia

Assessment Type

Case Study

Task Description

The case study will require you to address one of the topics below and prepare an overview, or case, about the issue in the Australian community, the population or group most affected, the characteristics of this group that are most relevant in planning public health initiatives to address the issue, the agencies or institutions involved in addressing the issue, and an evaluation of existing initiatives that can be found in the literature. The focus of this case study will be to understand the connection between risk or vulnerability and group characteristics in the diverse Australian community. Each student will be assigned a case study topic by the instructor to ensure that a range of cases are covered in each tutorial group.

The topics for this term are:

1. Motor vehicle accidents resulting in death or serious injury;
2. Suicide;
3. Anxiety disorders;
4. Cardiovascular disease;
5. Skin cancer
6. Diabetes;
7. Oral health problems (tooth decay);
8. Malnutrition

Assessment Criteria

This is an individual assignment of approximately 2000 words. The case study is to be written in formal academic language with appropriate references and citations. It must conform to the format outlined in the Study Guide and must contain the following sections: 1) Introduction -- outlines the issue and its magnitude in Australia; 2) Population at Risk -- describes the specific segments of the population that are most affected (you will need to consider age, gender, linguistic/cultural background, place of residence, occupational category, and so forth, but keep in mind that not all of these categories will be relevant for every issue above and you may need to consider other categories. It is recommended that you begin with age and then determine what other characteristics contribute to risk.); 3) Planning Initiatives -- describes the specific characteristics of the risk groups identified that would be useful in planning initiatives to address the issue and how health promotion activities could be tailored to the risk groups; 4) Review of Existing Initiatives -- discusses and evaluates existing initiatives reported in the literature to address the issue, including your own view on why they were or were not successful. This section must also note the organizations or agencies involved in addressing the issue, including whether these are government bodies, NGOs, private organizations, and so forth. Additionally, the case study must refer to appropriate scholarly literature that is relevant (ie relates to the Australian context). It must show evidence of original analysis and discussion and conform to accepted conventions for originality and academic integrity.

2 Reflective Journal

Assessment Type

Reflective Practice Assignment

Task Description

This is an individual assignment of approximately 2000 words based on your placement this term. The journal must consist of a minimum of 10 weekly entries that discuss and analyze the student's professional experiences and development that derive from placement. The focus of the journal is to show the student's deepening understanding of him or herself as a practitioner and to consider his or her experiences in the larger context of professional practice. It is not enough to just describe what was done during placement; the journal must show that the student has reflected on the experience and has tried to understand it in the context of his or her own learning. Guidelines for the reflective journal can be found at the end of the Study Guide. This is a reflective assignment, so a more informal writing style is acceptable. However, the reflection must not be wholly descriptive. It must contain an assessment of the ways in which the student's views or thinking have changed and what he or she has learned about him or herself as a practitioner and the community in which he or she is working.

Notes that form the basis of the journal entries must be completed on a weekly basis. This will show the development of the student's thinking and practice over the course of placement. There are spaces to record these notes as well as the issues the student should consider at the end of the Study Guide. The purpose of the notes is to help formulate the content of the journal which is the main part of this assessment. These notes MUST be submitted with the reflective journal in the form of an appendix to the assignment. The Study Guide contains detailed instructions and guidelines for this.

Assessment Criteria

The reflective journal will be assessed on the extent to which the student has shown genuine reflection on his or her practice, the extent to which personal learning is documented, and the student's application of this learning to current and future practice. In addition, evidence of developing perspective must be shown in both the journal itself and the reflective notes that accompany it. Although this is a reflective assessment that may be written in an informal style, the reflective journal must be all the student's own work and conform to accepted conventions of originality and academic integrity.

Academic Integrity Statement

As a CQUniversity student you are expected to act honestly in all aspects of your academic work.

Any assessable work undertaken or submitted for review or assessment must be your own work. Assessable work is any type of work you do to meet the assessment requirements in the unit, including draft work submitted for review and feedback and final work to be assessed.

When you use the ideas, words or data of others in your assessment, you must thoroughly and clearly acknowledge the source of this information by using the correct referencing style for your unit. Using others' work without proper acknowledgement may be considered a form of intellectual dishonesty.

Participating honestly, respectfully, responsibly, and fairly in your university study ensures the CQUniversity qualification you earn will be valued as a true indication of your individual academic achievement and will continue to receive the respect and recognition it deserves.

As a student, you are responsible for reading and following CQUniversity's policies, including the Student Academic Integrity Policy and Procedure. This policy sets out CQUniversity's expectations of you to act with integrity, examples of academic integrity breaches to avoid, the processes used to address alleged breaches of academic integrity, and potential penalties.

What is a breach of academic integrity?

A breach of academic integrity includes but is not limited to plagiarism, self-plagiarism, collusion, cheating, contract cheating, and academic misconduct. The Student Academic Integrity Policy and Procedure defines what these terms mean and gives examples.

Why is academic integrity important?

A breach of academic integrity may result in one or more penalties, including suspension or even expulsion from the University. It can also have negative implications for student visas and future enrolment at CQUniversity or elsewhere. Students who engage in contract cheating also risk being blackmailed by contract cheating services.

Where can I get assistance?

For academic advice and guidance, the Academic Learning Centre \(ALC\) can support you in becoming confident in completing assessments with integrity and of high standard.

What can you do to act with integrity?

Be Honest

If your assessment task is done by someone else, it would be dishonest of you to claim it as your own

Seek Help

If you are not sure about how to cite or reference in essays, reports etc, then seek help from your lecturer, the library or the Academic Learning Centre (ALC)

Produce Original Work

Originality comes from your ability to read widely, think critically, and apply your gained knowledge to address a question or problem
