General Information

Overview

Non-communicable diseases (NCDs) such as cardiovascular disease, cancer, diabetes, mental health, and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, are among the leading cause of premature death and disability globally including in Australia. The causes of NCDs are complex and multiple, they disproportionately affect groups with low socio-economic status, culturally and linguistically diverse populations and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. Our behaviour and lifestyles, which are influenced by the commercial and social determinants of health, are major contributors to the increased burden of NCDs and multimorbidity is also an emerging public health challenge. This unit explores the knowledge, principles and skills required to address NCD prevention and management in the Australian context as well as in low- and middle-income countries. In this unit, you will learn about current knowledge of the causes of NCDs and best practices in public health management. You will also gain the capacity to develop and evaluate NCD interventions and healthcare services leading to improved service delivery and a reduced burden of disease.
