General Information

Overview

The focus of this unit is on the multiple factors, personal, interpersonal and contextual, that influence psychosocial health and wellbeing across the life cycle. You will examine and critique dominant discourses of mental and physical health. You will analyse the normative and excluding approaches currently used to describe and explain complex and diverse phenomena such as disability, mental health, sexual identity and the ageing process. You will assess the challenges of socio-economic status, life opportunities, trauma and environment on the mental and physical health and wellbeing of individuals, groups and communities. Also, you will examine and critique theories of loss and grief, trauma and resilience and explore the risk and protective factors for mental and physical health and wellbeing provided by interpersonal relationships across the life cycle. This knowledge will be integrated with strategies for inclusive professional practice. Throughout the unit, particular consideration will be given to the continuing impact on the physical and mental health and wellbeing of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples of Australia's history of colonisation, displacement and discrimination.
